sat in the "well" in the board room and a delicate, pale woman, who spoke English with a strong Scotch accent, was the respondent to the formal questions. She was that of the British suffragettes, who were weary after her experience of the day she retired early, to all appearance composed for a good night's rest, but without worry as to the outcome of her

English Militants Are Persecuted by Situation

LONDON, Oct. 18.—General Edward M. House, the United States Minister to England, has been compelled to issue a protest against the treatment of the British suffragettes here. The British Social and Political union were open tonight, but only members of the organization and its reporters were admitted. They did not attempt to talk for publication.

The famous "war cabinet" of the militant organization has been scattered by illness and death. Miss Emily Flora Drummond is seriously ill. Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, the daughter of Mrs. Emmeline and Mrs. Sanders are in jail, while others are absent in the country. The British Social and Political union tonight called a meeting to take charge, and the cohorts gathered to learn if they could assist in any way their compatriots in the United States.

Miss Emily Flora Drummond has served several terms in jail for window-breaking and "obstruction," said.

"The American immigration authorities should take action which would tend to make the United States safe for English, the laughing stock of the civilized world. The English suffragettes are militants, but I confidently expect that the American suffragettes will make no such mistake as that of the resounding of the deportation order."

At a meeting tonight presided over by Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Lawrence, Miss Flora Drummond is seriously ill. Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, the daughter of Mrs. Emmeline and Mrs. Sanders are in jail, while others are absent in the country. The British Social and Political union tonight called a meeting to take charge, and the cohorts gathered to learn if they could assist in any way their compatriots in the United States.

The Bishop of Kensington hinted that the church now is ready to become a positive force and would back up the women in their militant conduct on the new lines.

Miss Mary Scott-Troy, of San Francisco, said: "I know positively that the British government does not desire that Mrs. Pankhurst be deported. To be impounded at England does not involve any risk of imprisonment or prove more turpitude. Farnell was impounded here, and afterward quite properly was warmly welcomed in America."

The report Mrs. Pankhurst would be illogical and absurd."

No Decision Expected

Before Monday in Case of Immigrants and Act of Congress

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Commissioner of Immigration Charles C. Landis tonight received the papers in the record of the hearing today of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst before the board of special inquiry at Ellis Island.

Tomorrow the commissioners and Acting Commissioner of Immigration will take up the record for consideration, but the commissioners said tonight he had no time to spend in deliberation.

It appears scarcely likely that final decision of the case will be reached before Monday.

The appeal on both sides of the celebrated case, couched in terms ranging from legal to extra-legal, was to pour in on the immigration bureau and began to reach the White House. When the commissioners and Mr. Wilson were referred to immigration officials, the former house officials pointed out the section of the act which vests the secretary of labor with final control of the case.

Suffragists at headquarters of the National Association of Woman Suffrage Association, while taking pains to make clear that Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst's case was being treated exactly like that of all other immigrants pointed out that there was still health and that consideration due to a woman in such condition would be accorded her.

Commissioner Caminetti's opinion will go to Acting Secretary Wilson, who may sustain or reverse the immigration commission.

The immigration order of the Ellis Island board is sustained. Mrs. Pankhurst must be placed in the port from which she sailed. Such an order might be stayed in the federal courts, as was recently done in the case of General Diaz, and which resulted in his liberation.

Today there has been communication between the British embassy and the British embassy over the incident.

Diplomats pointed out that the anti-suffragists were not here because of protest in her capacity as a British subject.

Hold Protest Meeting

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—A protest meeting of all factions forgot their differences, and at a hurriedly called meeting last night in the hall of the Missions of Christ and Political union were open tonight, but only members of the organization and its reporters were admitted. Four Killed by Wreck of Auto in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 18.—Mrs. Sammie Ferrell, Mrs. Guittard's mother, and Ashton Close, chauffeur, were among four persons killed when a Terminal company switch engine crashed into their automobile at City Park about 10 o'clock last night. One of the passengers, Mrs. Ferrell, was badly injured. In addition to the two drivers, Mrs. Ferrell, who was a local conductor, and Ashton Close, a patten florist, who bore his name.

Jerolimella had just purchased an automobile, and Close, a garage attendant, was demonstrating the car for them.

Information comes that they are men personally who have been appointed, and I know that it is a great sacrifice to do this. I am sure that the public beyond expression at the evidence of the fact that they accepted the appointment of the office.

"WILL CONTINUE ADDRESSES

I shall continue to go from place to place in the state, meeting the people especially during session of court, and address them on the subject of taxation its importance to the public, its necessary to the burden of getting the taxpayers of the county; that the tax is where the return is made up of the amount of value, and B owner of like property, returns it only at half or less than the value of the property. I think this is the proper way to deal with this important question. Let the commissioners affect the people, and then the state and that the state's honor and the honor and the status of the people in their state is their task. In using the word dishonest I don't mean to be offensive, but it is hardly short of that.

WILSON CONFERRED HONOR ON SOUTHERN SENATOR

Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, Named to Maritime Conference—Declines

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Senator Fletcher, of Florida, has been appointed by President Wilson as commissioner to represent the United States at the International Maritime Conference in London, England, on November 12. Senator Fletcher has declined the appointment, because he feels that his presence will be required in Washington at that time.

The London Maritime conference is the result of the阪神 disaster. Its purpose is to consider the form of insurance laws with especial reference to safety at sea. Senator Fletcher was a member of the committee that investigated the阪神 disaster and rendered invaluable service in this city. It is in recognition of his familiarity with the subject that President Wilson selected him as a commissioner to represent the United States in the conference.

At its last session Congress appropriated $1,000,000 to defray the expenses of the United States commissioners to the London conference.

Senator Fletcher was named by the president as a delegate to the international conference on arbitration held at Rome, Italy, several months ago, but he was unable to absent himself from Washington on account of the pending tariff legislation.

YUAN SHI KAI THANKS WILSON FOR HIS MESSAGE

President of Chinese Republic Sends Greetings to United States

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Acknowledgement of your message of congratulation upon my election as first permanent president of the Chinese republic has been received from Yuan Shih Kai at the state department. His answer reads:

"To the Honorable Woodrow Wilson,
President of the United States, Washington, D. C.—

"Intensely appreciative of your excellent and far-reaching compliment extended to me on the occasion of my inauguration as president of the Chinese republic, I offer you my deepest thanks for them. The high trust and confidence which the Chinese people have placed in me in this assembly have seen fit to place in me makes me fully conscious of the grave responsibility so well.

"Happy in the performance of my duties,
I am ever ready to follow the example of the United States to guide my course. It also affords me much delight to observe the progress of our country and the expectation for the advancement of China and the promotion of the peace and happiness and prosperity of all under the republican system of government. I hope that when my resolute aim and firm object of carrying on the new administration. With this in view, I hope to receive your interest from your excellency, my hope to draw on the bonds of friendship and good understanding that exist between our sister republics has grown stronger than ever to me to co-operate with your country to attain this end."

The letter was forwarded immediately to President Wilson.

THIS BILL WILL STOP NATIONAL CONTRIBUTIONS

If House Approves Senate Bill,
Big Campaign Contributions
Will End

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The first results of the congressional investigation of campaign expenditures came today when the Senate passed Senator Clark's bill prohibiting the sending of campaign funds from one state to another.

In the house approves, a measure will put tight limitation on the use on the activities of general political organizations and the work of such organizations as the National Civic League, the National Association for Woman's Suffrage.

The bill provides the carrying or sending of funds from one state to another to be used in the election of presidents or governors, or present election of congressmen, or any other elected officer without debate. In practice it is clear that its purpose was to prevent any campaign in a secret manner
by organizations, which did not come directly under the campaigning.

The proposed new law would not prevent the present work of national political organizations, however, if they make public reports of all contributions received and expended. Practically all the national committees make contributions to the state committees of their national organization.

It is believed the measure would curtail the use of campaign funds in money centers, but it would not curtail campaign activities on the part of personal agents, who might be indirectly interested in the election.

A further amendment of campaign contribution law was proposed today by the house, calling for a bill to prevent all corporations from contributing to campaigns for nomination, as they may be interested in contributing to election campaigns.

CHARGES ARE NAILED IN KIEV MURDER CASE

(By Associated Press.)

KIEV, Oct. 18.—The myth concerning the personal life of Jews in the neighborhood about the time the boy Andriyevsky, 12, was murdered, was dispelled today at the trial of the two men charged with the murder, by the testimony of Dr. Landau, a Jewish lawyer and Ettinger, who accounted for all the details of the case. It had been alleged that these two men were in some way implicated in the crime.

It was also shown with the laying of the foundation stone of the new church, which was to be groundless by the testimonies of Max Ziloff, one of the proprietors of the brick yard, who produced irrefutable proof that the ceremony occurred several days before the murder.

NICK WILBURN'S TRIAL MAY BE POSTPONED

Attorneys HaveAppealed
Cases Set for Hearing Day
Before Trial

MACON, Ga., Oct. 18.—Nick Wilburn, accused slayer of James King, a police commissioner, last December, and a fugitive in the Bibb county jail, is making preparation for trial in the Jones county superior court next Wednesday. He has been in jail ever since he was arrested, but until his attorney refused to make any kind of statement to press representatives, it was said he was one of the most quiet prisoners in the state. Yesterday Judge Park set his trial for next week, now that he has been brought up to date with thoughts of his trial that is very reticent.

It was reported yesterday that Wilburn intended to killing King, calming that he had no money, and that he would give him with a portion of the life insurance. She is held as a fugitive.

Wilburn told of how he arranged to go hunting with his companion, who was the two men were hunting quail. Wilburn shot and killed King, who was shot and killed him dead. The confession was made to his officer, and the police detective put Wilburn through the third degree. He then was released.

She has been confined in the Jones county jail at Gray, Ga., ever since, nothing having been done to complete his trial.

Afternoon, to discuss the nature of the defense, both attorneys have appealed cases set for hearing on the appointed cases set for hearing on the appointed day. It is not known if the trial will be postponed.

Modern Dance Dispute Splits Women's Meeting

ATLANTA, Oct. 18.—Discussion of the tango and the other modern dances has been the chief topic of the National Press Association, in session here, and today some of the women who are torn into two camps—those who are art critics and those who are dancing are meeting to meet the needs and manners of the young. No one seems to know what the others are doing.

Mrs. R. Frank Brown, of Chicago, president in the women's club of the national association, said that the modern dancing is one of the most important factors confronting the mothers of the young.

"As a general rule," she said, "the mothers not only watch their children dancing in the modern dances, but in many cases they themselves are dancing."

Mary S. Lockwood, a founder and one recent of the local D. A.

she took up the cudgels in defense of modern dancing, "one of the most beautiful dances she has ever seen." Then the conference stroke.

CAPETOWN, Oct. 18.—A famous Zulu warrior, King Cetwayo, who led his nation in the war of 1879, Cetwayo was defeated after the British army at the battle of Isandlwana, the fourth infantry regiment was massacred.

He died Saturday morning at the British camp still standing.

Both sides are making ready for a final battle in the approaching primary.

Something unique in the annals of Southern motordom was pulled off by the Buick Motor company on Friday morning.

The Buick Motor company had persuaded Captain Soroch, who was in Macomb for the State fair with his well-known show, "The Deep Sea Divers," to

CORDELE ELECTIONS WILL BE HELD ON NOVEMBER 12

Three Aldermen to Be Elected,
"Closed Town" Policy an Issue

(By Associated Press)

CORDELE, Ga., Oct. 18.—A "closed town" policy has been adopted by the Cordele voters for November 12 for the election of three aldermen, and with the understanding that the open town issue will be voted on at the same time.

W. D. Wilson and J. P. Lamb will represent the element that favors a closed town, while L. C. Johnson will support the open town idea, it is understood.

"As a general rule," she said, "the mothers not only watch their children dancing in the modern dances, but in many cases they themselves are dancing."

Tone of the Stock Market Was Strong From First to the Last

The Turn in Tide on the Exchange, Which Began in a Hesitating Way on Friday, Came Definitely Saturday

Weather Conditions

Forecast Till 1 p.m. Sunday.

Atlanta and Vicinity: Cloudy Tonight and Sunday; Probably Rainy.

Georgia: Cloudy tonight and Sunday; rain possible.

Alabama: Cloudy and cooler today, probably showers in evening.

Mississippi: Partly cloudy, cooler on the coast.

Texas: Weather improved on Friday moved rapidly northward to the St. Lawrence River, bringing with it cloudy weather over the entire state.

Lake: The rainfall was general, with most precipitation falling on the Mississippi, Alabama and western Georgia. More rain is indicated for Saturday.

Wash., D. C.: Weather cool and changeable, with some rain in the morning, possibly other than the general, continuing throughout the day.

The September statement of domestic shipping shows a gain of $15,000,000 over the corresponding period of 1912. An increase of 10% in the value of the improvement. The weekly review of the commercial agencies indicates the general condition of business is better than a year ago. Unofficial reports from the senate committee on currency would be made in the currency bill by the senate committee were classified as confidential.

The outstanding feature of the bank statement is an increase in loans of $15,000,000, which reflected the freezing of credits as a result of the war.

Reducing deposits and the amount of currency was virtually unchanged, though slightly less than a standard increase.

Interest rates irregular and derived little benefit from the rise in stocks.

Total market value of stocks, total market value of bonds, and total market value of preferred stocks advanced 3.4, the 28 coupon 1-2, the 4-6 and Panamas 24 1-4 on call.

LONDON STOCKS.

(By Associated Press.)

COTTON: London cotton market was quiet, with a slight advance in cotton and a general average decline in cotton and sugar shares realized.

Light cotton and sugar advanced in light covering and sugar declined 1/4 to 1 1/2 % apart partly.

VERDI'S BIRTHDAY TO BE CELEBRATED IN ATLANTA

Sunday evening will mark the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Verdi. He was arrested and tried before a king's magistrate, severely reprimanded, and was about to be thrown into the donkey pen. His reply and explanation was that the arrest was made because he had written a libelous article against the king. The magistrate freed the composer, and the crowd cheered him.

Verdi's birthday is also the anniversary of the birth of Victor Emmanuel II, King of Italy.

The initials of the above were formed into a shield.

The reply was so ingenious that the magistrate freed the composer, and the crowd cheered him.

Mr. Wesley Johnson and Mrs. Hall Cook were quietly married yesterday evening, October 11, in the presence of the bride's parents and a few close friends at the home of the bride's parents at Chestnut street.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Johnson are from their friends at their home at Chestnut and Simpson streets.

A Perfect Diamond

Will Look Shabby In a Poor

Setting

Furthermore, there is definite style in setting. Each year is marked by new modes.

Diamonds bought new this Fall and Winter should be set according to fashion's late decrees.

In the world's diamond markets The Eugene V. Haynes Company pits expert knowledge against all comers, and we believe we bring many of the world's best diamonds to Atlanta each year. We make an equally careful selection of jewelers to set these gems, and in each setting we incorporate the newest ideas from the great fashion centers.

We cordially invite you to visit our new quarters and see for yourself how the exquisite beauty of rare gems is brought out by proper settings.

Are You Fastidious About Sweets?

You like, we'll say, a full rich sweetness that doesn't cloy, and still is delicately freighted with your favorite flavor.

Or you like to come upon surprises in flavor-new combinations, original blending, that make you wonder and guess—and try another piece.

And, above all, your sweets must be FRESH.

These are the qualities you get in WINNIE DAVIS Candies.

They're delicious. They're pure and cleanly made. They're protectingly packed.

And they're only FIFTY CENTS the pound. Why should you pay double, or nearly double?

Paris-Copied Suits at $35

Flattering Reproductions of the Originals Divorced from their High Paris Prices

WE GET what we look for. Style was the incentive back of our buyer's recent New York trip. He searched the markets for style and found it. He knew where to look. These suits are the proof.

They come to us from two suit makers who take first rank as producers of medium-priced suits. They import their own models from Paris—copy or adapt the styles to please American women.

The Inspiration of Paris is evident in these beautiful and "different" suits. In their fine fabrics, excellent materials and custom tailoring, they represent the best in clever styles and values at $35 and $39.50.

The assortment affords choice of scores of suits in almost a score of different styles. Short, medium or long cutaways, plain or belted styles, some showing the Russian tendency. Plain or draped skirts, Zibelines, boucles, broadoths, sashes, garters, novelties. Black and all the leading colors. $35 and $39.50.

Oriental Rugs at Reduced Prices

Just 11 More Shopping Days in Which to Share These Reductions of a Fifth to a Half

This Oriental Rug Sale was planned on broad, vigorous lines. Owing to the unsettled political conditions in the far East, a big New York importer made extensive purchases at decisive price concessions. He bought more than he could use, and made special price reductions to hasten their distribution. We plunged heavily. The result is the best assembled stock of Oriental Rugs we have had in some years, at lower prices than we have ever asked. Some typical reductions:

ATLANTIANS ENTERTAINED AT THE NATIONAL CONSERVATION EXPOSITION

An interesting account from Chattanooga, Miss Zelia Armstrong, one of the many brilliant entertainers which have been given in connection with the National Conservation exposition, and in which Atlantians have been prominent figures.

Each week of the National Conservation exposition in Knoxville seems more and more like a social affair than ever before. The society women of the exposition city have united to make the social events of the exposition as for its commercial and agricultural advancement.

Miss Dorice Van Deventer, daughter of Mr. Justice and Mrs. Lurton, and as she is at home, is president of the women's board and has added the tact and charm of a social hostess to the routine duty of a woman's board president.

She is beautiful and immensely popular and has been assisted by five vice presidents, all prominent Knoxville matrons.

Mrs. William W. Davis, who gave birth to Miss Ethel Hughes, of Denver, Colo. She has entered into the social life of the city since moving to Knoxville for the event. Mrs. Lowry, of Kentucky, made a magnificent show of ribbons. Miss Mary Allgood Jones, of Atlanta, possibly the best known horsewoman in the country, turned blue ribbons, and a silver cup on the 30th.

Miss Marion Briscoe, a lovely young Knoxville girl, was a blue ribbon and graceful rider.

Mrs. John Hill, of Atlanta, has less time for her hobby after a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Loosan and other relatives.

Her son, John, is a celebrated horse and carriage maker.

Reception Tendered Mrs. Penneyacker.

Mrs. George W. Denny is vice president of the Tennessee Federation of Women's clubs. She has been less active in social affairs than in her club work, but women were present as for instance at the day when Mrs. Penneyacker, the national president of the Federation of Women's clubs, addressed the exposition.

Mrs. Penneyacker was given a reception in the afternoon at the Greenery, the armchair club, where the social life has centered. Close to the greenery was the flower show, which was anchored close to shore, but floating on the broad lake. The houseboat has been a great success, and the houseboat honor President Wright and Mrs. Van Deventer.

Colonel J. Lowry and Mrs. Lowry entertained one of the riders in the horse show who won a blue ribbon.

No Offence Meant (Williamsburg, N. C. Item)

We wish to apologize to Mrs. Orloven Overbeck, of Atlanta, for the statement that appeared in our paper last week, and are heading, "Mrs. Overbeck's Big Feet." The word we had ought to have used is a French word, which means the very best quality.

It means a celebration and is considered a very nice word.

Colonel J. Lowry and Mrs. Lowry entertained one of the riders in the horse show who won a blue ribbon.

KEELY'S

A Display of Eastern Rugs

Decorative Silver

There is a strong leaning to the picturesqueness in the decoration of sandwich plates, platters and trays this season, which makes this practical line of wedding gift suggestion even more varied than usual.

Severe simplicity is good, but it alternates with pierced work, elaborate engraving, the repoussé, and even introduces cut glass into very effective pieces.

Our showing is complete.

OUR ASTROLOGER

"The Stars incline, but we are not compelled."

ZORONSCOPE

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1913.

Work with both power and will

Saturn this day bodies ill.

Astrologers find that the stars to day are unfriendly. They counsel

you to be particularly careful during the time when Saturn is in your horoscope aspect.

The warning given to Saturn is read as a warning for all who desire change of occupation or place of business. Unfortunately, the stars are not likely to be propitious and those who adapt to be poor and those who adapt to improve will suffer severely.

The rule is, however, that all who seek gain or new enterprises. The stars will rest this day, avoiding whatever may have any special bearing on the future.

While this configuration prevails,

astrologers declare that the aged are particularly unfortunate. By this same sign

it is well to be inclined to have relations with old persons who are likely to be querulous and unreasonable.

Worries, discouragement and melancholy are common. Persons born under these stars are said to be particularly sensitive, since

Saturn is in their ruling planet.

There will be a great deal of trouble this month, but the stars will not be so bad as to indicate the outbreak of some political trouble.

Strikes will be numerous before the end of the month, but the stars will not be

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

A HISTORIC meeting of the Atlanta Women's club for the fall and winter was held Monday afternoon at the rooms on Baker street. While the meeting was the most active and formal one, a short half hour was devoted to discussion of plans for the winter's work and business of importance was transacted.

Mrs. A. C. McLean, the able president, gave a brief but comprehensive talk in which she outlined the scope of the winter's work, and introduced each of the chartered committees who in turn gave a sketch of their individual plans.

The club year, as mapped out, will be a busy one, as many problems and difficulties to women will be considered at each session.

Of interest to business men will be the information given in a resolution introduced by Mrs. James Jackson and enthusiastically endorsed by club members, the veiled question of a city market will receive attention.

The meeting closed with an informal reception at which the members had the opportunity for pleasant reunion after the long summer vacation.

THE palm room of the Georgian Terrace, with its array of palms and other tropical growths, made an attractive setting for the annual and representative annual meeting of women who were gathered Tuesday afternoon to hear the first reading of the season given by the Atlanta Center Drama troupe, Dr. J. T. H. Miller, director. "Julius Caesar," much discussed play by John Galsworthy.

The play is necessarily, as the title would suggest, of a somber nature, and to the audience, the plot and the characters developed and unfolded in a panorama before the eye, the expression and sympathy of the women which the manager endowed the lines riveted the attention of his audience, and many persons present were moved and gladation of becoming better acquainted with other works of the author.

The Tuesday afternoon assemblies are proving an entire new interest in the day's entertainment, and a most welcome one, if it can be judged by the increased membership. Arrangements have been made with a number of distinguished actors to appear before the audience, and when William Faversham, who, besides being a noted actor, is in demand as a lecturer on adult subjects, will address the large early in December, and his coming to Atlanta will be a great pleasure to the membership.

A MEETING of the Nine o'clock German club was held Tuesday evening. In discussing plans for the winter the committee decided to have the annual meeting in October, and the club will offer a special ladies' party, the attractive souvenir to be given to the members who will appear on the ballroom floor for the opening number of the program.

The cost of the affair was a fee.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Lovewell was elected president and Mr. Westervelt Terhune, secretary and treasurer. The members of the club, however, include Mr. L. H. Miller, Mr. Dozier Lovewell and Mr. Stender Fleming.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Huntley, of Atlanta, received a cordial welcome from their many friends upon the occasion of their visit to Mrs. Huntley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Speer, in Andes Park.

The party at which Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Damrosch entertained Wednesday evening was a lovely complement to the social life of the season, as given at the Piedmont club and the others, including two friends, who came a short distance, graced the flower-laden tables.

Mr. and Mrs. Huntley will remain in Buffalo in the course of ten days, but Mrs. Huntley and her young son will return to Atlanta.

A MEETING of the Nine o'clock German club was held Saturday evening.

On Wednesday evening, Mrs. Frank Marshall Slaton entertained at dinner. Mrs. Slaton entertained at dinner Wednesday evening at their home. Friends of the couple were being complimented to John E. Foster and Mrs. Foster, of New Orleans.

At the recent meeting of the club daffodils formed the centerpiece of the beautifully appointed table, the initials of the couple being a lovely suggestion of pink.

During the meeting of the State Bar, Judge and Mrs. Foster, Judge and Mrs. A. D. Pardee, Judge and Mrs. W. T. Newland, Mrs. John M. Roberts, Mrs. M. D. Grant, Miss Isabella Morris, Mrs. Morris Brandon, Mr. Morris.

A PARTY of students returned the early part of the week from a trip to the mountains where they attended the annual meeting of the gayety club.

Mr. John Hill and Miss Mary Allard Lewis were among several students as housewives and were awarded the first place in the competition.

Miss Jones rode Matt Cohen's English saddle horse, a handsome silver leaping colt, the award being which was presented to her by Mr. Cohen.

SATURDAY Mrs. Boiling Jones was hostess at a luncheon bunch on Peachtree street, the occasion being in honor of the opening of the new elaborate of the season.

The suggestion of an Hallowe'en Eve was carried out in the artistic decoration which will prevail at the Autumn flowers of every shade and form, and many handsome growing plants, will be used to give the ensemble of a garden, and made an attractive background for the beautiful costumes present.

The young dancing contingent were well received, and the dance on the evening, which was unusually well attended, marked off the happy social affairs of the past week.

THURSDAY evening was marked by an attractive homecoming. The marriage of Miss Mary Schaefer took place in Andes Park, and the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Schaefer, on the wedding day.

The young couple, a beautiful one, and marked by elegance and simplicity of

Mr. and Mrs. Schaefer, who are at present traveling in the east, will take a long vacation after their return, their attractive new bungalow, which was recently completed in Druid Hills.

Seymour-Jackson

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Jackson, was a beautiful event. Saturday evening, taking place at the home of the bride, 100 East Fourth street, at 8 o'clock.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. D. C. Dugay, and an altar of handsome palms banked high against the mantel in the living room, stately white lilies in the center, provided a contrast against the green of the foliage. The tall cattails added to the pale light of the impressive wedding scene.

The entire lower floor was thrown open to the public, and the room was filled with a profusion of goldenrod and feather chrysanthemums, while ropes of osmanthus and the branches of chandeliers were entwined with bambus.

The young bride entering with her father, Mr. J. N. Seymour, was lovely in her white gown, which was a muslin lace made with court train and embroidered in seed pearls.

The angel stood beside the couch, the shroud with pearl ornaments, and the corsage was of pink roses. Her veil was tucked up and fastened to the hair with a satin band embroidered with pink roses.

The bride's shoes were covered with white lace and the bride's dress was brocaded with pink roses and carried with a train.

The bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Jackson, was a picture of manly strength and dash, wearing a dark suit, a white shirt with a pink rose and a pink rose tie.

The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. D. A. R. Restaurant

Cook, Mrs. J. N. Seymour, of the Joseph Hirschberg chapter, will have charge of the restaurant at the "House that Jack Built."

Tech Piles Up 33 to 0 Score On Mercerites

The Baptists Were Game, but Were Outweighed, Outplayed and Outlucked

Three hours before weight, speed and running yesterday afternoon, Tech's forward men resulted in a 33 to 0 victory for the Yellowjackets over Mercer.

Tech's homecoming was working at the right moments. Tech's forward men were the right places, and Mercer's men, though energetic, could not maintain the pace to keep the score as low as the result of the first quarter warmed by Coach Heitman in Chattanooga. Sewanee and Tennessee had the o. o. with Tech's forward men. Tech's play was noticeable.

WINS $10,000 BET BY TOURING CONTINENT

C. Haven Smith (at left), the movie who won a $10,000 bet by motoring from San Francisco to New York in thirty days. Mr. Smith made the trip in his Locomobile Six.

Crossing the American continent in a motor car is no longer considered unusual, but this latest achievement attracts attention.

C. Haven Smith, of San Francisco, has just completed a record-breaking tour of the United States, driving from San Francisco to New York, made under novel conditions.

An amateur driver, he piloted the car himself, and the total cost was $10,000, and thereby won a wager of $10,000.

Smith's bet was for the money.

Another of the unusual conditions was the fact that he was not permitted to enter a garage or repair shop along the route, nor to make any mechanical adjustments. R. E. Hillman was the official observer on the trip, whatever attention was needed.

for the car had to be given by Smith difficulty, including a cloud burst in Wyoming, and a terrific hailstorm on the Colorado plains line, which tore the car's top to ribbons.

When it became known that the long journey was to be undertaken, Smith received many offers of services from car manufacturers, but decided to go it easy on his automobile, Sirs, declaring the arduous run a JOY RIDE.

"The trip was just as strenuous as our first fears lead us to prepare for," said Smith.

"There were days when we never would have been able to get the car out of bed, had it not been necessary to keep going in order to win the wages.

Snappy Sidelights on Happenings in Automobile Circles

The new Hupmobiles, as announced for 1914, will contain no radical changes in the exterior or interior.

Numerous refinements and improvements, however, have been added which will give greater comfort than ever.

C. D. Hastings, general manager of the company, said the following:

"In the two years that the Hupmobile '29' has been on the market we have seen tens of thousands of them make a single radical change or development. In 1913, for example, 122 changes were made. In 1914, 127 changes were first announced; it contained four times which were then new to American motors."

"These same features are now being standardized on the last time on sale of America's finest cars. This has been standard on the Hupmobile for some time, and the engineers have done their work they have only justified their fitness."

"One of the most important addition that has been made in the new '32' model is the adoption of the new version of the Westinghouse electric starting and lighting system on all types of cars. It is a complete system of electrical cost, with other optional equipment such as over-size tires, demountable wheels, etc."

"The Hupmobile body design will remain the same, but the car has been so adopted enables us to get our cars closer to the ground than any other type of car on the market."

"The body is built with a high, straight back, the bow front forming a pointed stream. Built with the motor hood and radiator. You will note that this style of body construction is being adopted by the leading American makers."

"The color scheme of the new cars is slightly changed. The running gear is white, and the body is black, and there, together with the black body, makes a very pleasing combination."

WRECK TESTS CAR.

Through the unintentional kindness of two transcontinental railroads the engineers of the Studebaker corporation have been compelled to conduct a series of tests to determine the unique data regarding the resistance to shock of the various materials which are used to make up a modern automobile.

The experiment took place one afternoon at the junction of the two roads which intersect at once, one running the intersection at once, one running the other square, the middle road being the transcontinental road.

Backed by a force of thousands of tons, the charging locomotive cut its way through the iron and steel until it as entered, picked up a Studebaker and as turned, part was round used as a battering ram against the other side of the car, and tossed it fifty feet into the air. The car then came to a standstill, and the iron and steel automobile was shipped back to Detroit.

Superficially it looked a total wreck.

But when the car was stripped to the vital parts of the chassis the resulting inspection showed that the body was still intact, cross members and all, while the motor and its internal mechanism remained well as new. The wheel and tire assembly was standing well, with spokes complete. Thus the demountable rims were undamaged by the impact.

When the engineers had figured out impacts and stresses and compared the results with the original test, they agreed that automobile had had its limit exceeded and failed far forward of its limit of safety.

Without the intervention of accident with human composition could pass the ruin of a modern motor car.

CARE OF TIRES.

No particular automobile is more abused than the tire. Where one man drives carefully thinking of them, another carelessly, and still others consider the damage to both the tubes and shoes which is sure to follow.

When the engineers of the United States Tire company conducted their tests,

they found that great care which the engine receives from the car owner can be easily secured by proper lubrication, cooling, adjustment and all that contributes to its economy and safety.

Modern tires are designed to withstand severe driving with chains placed over them, and will withstand the maximum mileage.

The care of tires does not take much time, but can save a great deal of trouble, inflation, neglect of cuts, greases left on casings, running in car while speed is increased, and breaking when driving.

Ritchie Maps Busy Autumn, But on Paper

Lightweight Says He Will Meet
Cross and Murphy, Also Welsh When Offer Is Good

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Willie Ritchie, with his soft, pleasant voice and his friendly smile, is the last fellow in the world one might take for a fighter. But Willie has delivered the goods. He is full of vim and energy, and ability to continue delivering for some time to come.

"I expect to box Leach Crown here according to program October 24," says Willie. "I will take one or two more bouts afterward if I find time, but I'll probably fight Tommy Murphy on the coast on Thanksgiving day." Then I have a date with Charlie Cross from Kenosha and Milwaukee, where the sport is just opening up. I'd like to take them all in. There's nothing like training when business is good."

In California lots of people think I'll be afraid to tackle Tommy. Tommy has done some smart fighting there, and there's the word of him."

"Welsh can have a fight whenever there's a good offer for it. I dropped that idea because it was simple, because the promoters failed to make good their contract. The next ring is the neighborhood face trade men. If the fight had come of labor day it would have been a smash hit. It would have been Saturday and Sunday and Monday clear, people would have come to Vancouver from both sides of the border. McLeod and lots of other places."

WELSH HURTS ANKLE.

—Willie Ritchie, Freshport, hurt his ankle and had to postpone the fight. Before the later date arrived the authorities were so anxious that he could only run thirty days under Canadian law, and which had already run over eight months, that the promoters reluctantly began to figure how much money they might lose on the bout.

They began to look for a loophole, and they soon found it. They shifted the responsibility from themselves to the promoter, and referred to put up the certified check paper to Willie Ritchie, as agreed upon. It seemed to Willie Ritchie, as agreed upon, that a fight at a loss, and very much doubtless a loss, was better than no fight at all.

"I gave the promoter twenty-four hours to go through with his plans, and when he came back to Vancouver if he failed to do so, he must have wanted me to leave, for I never stay longer than a day or two unless I'm kept out of sight entirely."

"The first thing I want to do is to fight very long if I can find time. I'd like to take a leisurely ride around New York, and when I get back home I'd like to do that while I'm champion, because it would be a great thrill. No one knows how long he can last as champion, you know. I expect to be champion for a long time, and the best of care and attention and live like any boy at home with his folks. But as soon as I can get a team can take my tit away but he'll welcome to it. I don't care any opponent."

PERSONNEL OF CFC TEAM.

The personnel of the CFC team of 1913 is as follows:

SPECIAL LEAGUE FOR THE JOURNAL.

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY, Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 18.—After about a month's work on the verge of the big season, Coach Dan McDuglin has about finished his work on the gridiron shape and form.

There has been plenty of material to choose from, but it is all new and raw.

The nucleus around which the Vanderbilt team has been built with Michael's help is strong, and namely, Budger, Morgan, Ammie Sikes, Tom Brown, Nuck Smith, and the like. The team has been given a good start by the coach and his assistants, and the players are now in top condition.

"Amen," said Tom Brown. "Nuck and I are going to give our best men to Vanderbilt if he fails. He must have wanted me to leave, for I never stay longer than a day or two unless I'm kept out of sight entirely."

Hapeville Man Makes His Position on the Matter Clear

The Journal:

The Journal of October 15 quotes myself as opposing tithing as a principle.

Many words of explanation will follow.

The brevity of the association's report of Brother Paul's statement is wholly strange to me.

I have always had a desire to do more for the Lord.

Mr. H. H. Barnes, my pastor, often exhorts us to do more.

Brother Paul has done much for the Lord.

He has given his life to the Lord.

RED SEAL PLANT HIGH TYPE OF SHOE INDUSTRY

Trip Through Factory Shows How Atlanta Is Marked Large on Shoe Map

Out on Edgewood avenue at the big factory building of the modern "day-light type" where the latest ideas are in their making, putting Atlanta on the shoe industry map and future are indicating it with a large spot and no tiny dot.

A little journey through the home of the Red Seal shoes shows the visitor raw materials brought from the ends of the earth being made into materials which will be worn by workmen, some of whom had experience in giant factories in both this country and Europe.

If an efficiency engineer could find work at the Grey factory, it is plain to the layman visitor what he would do, and it was a layman who was shown through the plant and gave the impressions of this particular home of Atlanta-made goods.

A leather expert, which the layman can see as well as the factory expert, is to be found in the Red Seal plant, his thinking plant of which Atlanta should be proud is perhaps even more forcibly impressed upon the visitor than would be on the manufacturer accustomed to such sights.

The leather building comes the leather of many kinds and finishes, some of it from England, some from France, some from Canada, Africa. Following this leather through the operations that it undergoes in the plant, the layman sees the form of finished shoes, is an education in the wizardry of highly perfected machinery.

From the big hydraulic presses that cut the leather to the peasant mowers that work ticks from the last, there is a range of machinery that an outsider would hardly believe possible, indicated that there are 200 distinct operations in the making of the shoes some idea can be had of the complexity of the process.

There are machines to keep uniform the thickness of the soles that correct a sole as little as one thousandth of an inch.

The leather cutting machine for doing the sole trimming that makes 6,000 revolutions a minute.

The maze of machinery goes right kid, grain, calf, leather, all kinds, few persons know is used in shoe-making at all—handmade.

In about two days from the time material is cut until the same material is packed in boxes as a finished product. It is on the lasts eight days.

Atlanta's shoe plant is developing.

The leather is packed in boxes and the there and the output has doubled in the last year. It is one of the leaders among the industries. It is one of Atlanta's manufacturing city as well as a distributing point.

H. L. ATWATER TO AUCTION HIS HOUSEHOLD GOODS

Will Sell His Personal Effects Monday at 9 South Pryor Street

Owing to the recent death of his wife, H. L. Atwater will sell at auction Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock, at the auction house of W. C. Harrison, at 9 South Pryor street, all his household goods, including furniture, crockery, stove and lots of household articles, some very handsome diamonds.

Atwater, the oldest member of the traveling salesmen's fraternity in Atlanta, was a member of the Atlanta Commercial Travelers' association, and has been prominent in business circles here. For the past year or so he has been unable on account of affliction, to do any traveling, but he is still a friend among the traveling men in Atlanta who will be interested attending his auction Monday and helping to make it a success.

WORKING SATURDAY PAYS, SAYS TRAVELER

Thus the reason for this is that many more married men than there were among the traveling lines of the old days.

"Long trips were more common, usually extending into five or six weeks. They were not necessarily restricted men on the road these days and they cut the wear short and go home. We are working Saturday now and Sunday a profitable day and I believe it can't be beat."

But many of those who are not working Saturday would be willing to do so if the feel of the road in their bones come appreciable. They do not because of this general belief that it does not pay.

"Give it a trial, is the advice to these from Mr. Harrison.

J. N. Binder, Returning From Extensive Trip, Tells of Trade Conditions

A good reception and active business is what the specialty salesman traveling Georgia and Alabama can expect, Judge J. N. Binder, president of the Binder Frame Manufacturing company, makes on his recent trip through southwest Georgia and southern Alabama.

Mr. Binder called on art dealers, stationers and furniture dealers with his line of moldings and picture frames and rooms a great field of opportunity throughout the trade.

Artificial lighting is considered a specialty and something of a luxury, the good business this dealer secured can easily be accounted for by the fact that conditions are favorable to a trade in artificial lighting fixtures or things that are not necessities and sell well only when times are good.

For grown-ups it's never-failing delight, for the teenagers it is an art in a fairy palace.

There are two reasons for Mr. Binder's success. One is his anticipation of enjoying these things himself, the other is the fact that the weather will start a brisk demand for these "goodies" that will be felt immediately after the retailer passed up to the jobbers of fancy groceries. And the latter Mr. Binder.

"These light fixtures are usually referred to as 'holiday goods,'" said Mr. Binder, "but they are also known to be more properly termed fireside luxuries, for the demand for them is not constant. For example, during the holidays the first real cold snap brings calls for them from the jobbers, who then turn them up on the shelves.

"The consumption of such luxuries is constantly being enlarged, the manufacture six reported by Mr. Binder to be buying more and more fixtures every year before the fine prints and photographs.

E. E. Hugley, of the Hugley Oil Co., would open a several days sales trip, beginning Monday morning in Atlanta, Friday afternoon. Mr. Hugley drives both the car and the sales.

VISIT TO FRAZIER PLANT REVEALS BIG INDUSTRY

This Company Sends Its Mixed Stock Feeds All Over the Southeast

More and more is it coming to be recognized that Atlanta's greatness is founded on its manufacturing enterprises. The city has attained its present proportions by its unsurpassed position in the South, by its incomparable prospect of progress which its citizens possess. These factors will contribute greatly to the city's advantage. But they are not enough. They must have the best in raw ingredients and the half-a-thousand manufacturing plants that are now here.

The J. D. Frazier company is one of these manufacturing enterprises, which is located on Edgewood avenue. The feed throughout the length and breadth of this state, making Atlanta a good knowledge where the animals are fed and hogs are fattened. This company has a large plant which has a milling and mixing plant with the capacity of from 50 to 100 tons of mixed feeds daily.

With J. D. Frazier as guide, a firing line was taken through the plant in the big plant last week and found in a revelation of what Atlanta means in the way of feed production.

The company makes four brands of stock feed of varied proportions of ingredients, each containing a percentage of molasses which is their distinctive feature. Their brand names are Mo-grain, Alfarina, Timbo and Crystal-crack, Alfarina, is a dry feed, containing only 10 per cent of molasses, enough to absorb the dust of the dry ingredients. The other kinds contain 20 per cent of molasses. The feed for sows, Mo-grain, contains as high as 30 per cent of molasses.

In addition to these feeds, the company manufactures a number of feeds for hogs, from hogs to low-grade flour.

Alfarina, besides its small per cent of molasses, contains alfalfa meal, corn, grain, whole meal and cracked meal. Mo-grain has the same ingredients, its higher percentage of molasses, however, giving it a different texture. Timbo and Crystal-crack, alfalfa meal, corn, oat clippings and molasses, and cracked meal of the same ingredients, with a difference in the proportions.

The distinctive feature of all these feeds as has been said, is the fact they contain molasses. The molasses serves several purposes. It is one of the healthiest foods known for stock. Its sweet taste gives the animals a joyful appetite. It is a good source of saliva, which aids in the digestive processes. The feeds are used as they are, or are balanced ratios, keeping the stock fat and sleek in the pink of health. The molasses is a good source of energy, and the most soundest materials and being mixed here at home any user can visit exactly what goes into them.

The grain is brought to cars to the back of the plant, the company's plant where it is compacted by gravity to each of the feeds intended for mixture. A mill crushes the grain to the required size, and the grain is then mixed with the various ingredients, the various ingredients including the molasses, which is pumped from tanks into the mixing machinery. One product is produced in each tank, and the molasses is brought in tanks to the siding and connected to a storage tank in the back of the plant.

The Craig mixer is a special machine used in mixing the feeds. It is a motor driven machine which is required in the feed required in the feed. Another one of the company's special facilities is the grain elevator, which is 100 feet long, which can handle 1,500 bushels of grain per hour.

The company's building is stacked throughout its great length to the ceiling, and the floor space is utilized to the full. All the equipment used in the manufacture of products is used in the building.

It has a storage capacity of 500,000 bushels of grain, and in addition to making its own brands the company puts its products in other companies' bags and sacks for dealers in feed stuffs. All its products no matter under what brands, are provided with bags and sacks, and are sent to dealers who bring back constant repeat orders.

All its goods are placed in new sacks to keep the goods in fresh, clean state and prevent insects from getting at them. Hand sacks are sold for waste. The company sells goods all over Georgia, in Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Florida. Its milling in transit allows it to reach its customers with the utmost facility and promptness.

Sales Manager Hudson, of the McCord-Stewart company, had a recent visit to the Rome store, which he says is doing a fine business.

R. C. Jones, the McCord-Stewart company's north Georgia man, is sending five bunches of candy and coffee orders.

J. J. Williamson made only one town call at Marietta, Ga., this week and made three. The vagaries of a motor car was the cause of his long trip, the driver taking the engine remedied than the gasoline gave out. The Atlanta wholesale house is doing a fine business admiring the scenery.

J. S. Chase, the north Georgia man of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, came in yesterday from a successful trip to the mountains.

J. Seig, North Carolina representative of the West Disinfecting company, is in Atlanta for a few days. Mr. Seig is the son of John W. Seig, attorney for Harry K. Thaw.

John Silvey & Co. are cutting the next crop of hay on their famous alfalfa patch, next to their building on Marietta street.

More calash pipes than the concern ever sold before were sent this week to the city of Atlanta, the result of the fact that Ellis Whiteley, of the city's largest firm made for the Capital City Tobacco company a large order. He went out to speak with the men with whom the result that the company had all the sales of pipes in general. The popular calash, however, seems to be making a come back, according to Mr. Whiteley's report on the entire nation.

H. P. Lockett and R. E. Shire were to be in the Consolidated Paper Company yesterday, the former from Savannah and the latter from Montgomery.

W. C. Willis, southern wholesale representative of the Baldwin Paper company, was in Atlanta this week, trying to get into the territory, returning to Atlanta today.

James F. Reeves, who is with the Ogleby Grocery company, reports that he has been enjoying splendid business during his recent trip to South Carolina and other parts of the southern territory, returning to Atlanta today.

L. V. Holloman, who is carrying the Farm Bull grain down the central route, has just returned from the western bunch and now races the veterans. If he continues to improve he will soon be in a class to himself.

All the salesmen of the E. L. Adams company are taking orders now for carriages for delivery in November. They have been promised to receive its first shipment of the Florida product about November 1.

W. H. Eckford, M. C. Kenner and A. L. Johnson, all of the Atlanta office, are on vacation in for a week end at the M. C. Kiser home.

They had to hand it to Bill, quartered at Paine & Stamps' last week. He is now as the champion prune artist, having won the first place last week. "I didn't miss a customer," said Mr. Quarters.

"We have already sold this season 2,000 boxes of California peans," said Sport Banear, of Paine & Stamps. "This amount to 200 tons. The California product is very fine but these peans could not be equalled in Georgia."

Apple cider time has arrived. Dixie Pickle and Preserving Company, which company that among other things makes the famous product of Atlanta-made cider, has received a good shipment of Dornette desks last week from Cincinnati to supply the trade for office furniture.

W. C. Gandy, storekeeper of Paine & Stamps, is spending the weekend with his parents at Carrollton, Ga. He was accompanied by his wife and son, Harry Olin Stamps Jr.

L. H. Davis is the new south Carolina traveler for the Consolidated Paper company, with headquarters at Columbia, S. C., where he will start his week for his new connection.

E. P. Lewis, of the McClure Ten-cent company, is kept on the jump this week, as he is getting out goods for stores he has opened up this year. He says he has never seen so many new stores open up so fast. Lewis sold more goods during the month of September than any month since he started in business, which is six years. His last sale of an open store was to Mr. George Griffith of Buchanan, Ga., making his first opening since August 16.

T. D. Anderson, of the McClure Ten-cent company, leaves Sunday for Dothan, Ala., to open a new 5 and 10-cent store. C. C. Maxson goes to Washington, Ga., to open another.

He is located in the office of the McCord-Stewart company, where H. A. McDonald declares that certain pictures of the new store in South Fulton, Ga., was very inaccurate and did him great injustice in that it represented him as being a small boy. He is the same half-headed Bishop as of yore. He is a man of 40, with his eyes closed always asking him if he has really purchased and is wearing a wig.

C. C. Phillips, in south Georgia for the Capital City Tobacco company, left to the Pine Line, reader some news of the men of the sample case, who so far as the south is concerned, is the same. Mr. Banks is the only person at the Atlanta office who has not yet got into his samples. He is out to make it big.

E. L. Adams, of the E. L. Adams company, spent last Wednesday at Atlanta, Ga., where he attended a meeting of the board of the Southern Wholesale Grocers association.

R. Banks is the only person at the H. L. Stager company who has not yet got into his samples. Mr. Banks is the shipping clerk and it's up to him to

JENKINS TELLS OF TRAVELERS' KNOWLEDGE

Says Chamber of Commerce Should Have One Actual Traveler

Editor Young Line:
How many traveling men are there on Mr. Lounsherry's chamber of commerce committee? I mean real travel men, not those who are only business men and will undoubtedly fill their mission with credit to themselves and the chamber. I mean men who are born to travel, who are born to represent real good and true traveling men. I mean men who are pointed, men that sell goods on the road who are not imitators, but live wires, individually, collectively, personally.

It was nearly twenty years ago they put out their first catalogue. The present one, their eleventh, is nearly three times larger than the one put out by Wilensky, secretary of the company, in 1886. It is the catalogue "author" and is quite popular.

"A-go-in" since 1886 and a "go-in" all the time, it is the company uses and its "new" catalog certainly bears out the claim.

Town order more ten-cent cigars than other companies, and the吸烟者 to his sharmanship in the more luxurious class of smokers is unsettled, but the fact is well known.

H. T. Burton is making an canvass record for a man at his first year on the road. He is setting a mark that will stand for a long time.

A. R. Sewell is said to be making a record for a man at his first year on the road. He is setting a mark that will stand for a long time.

T. W. Martin is said to travel South Carolina territory for John Silvey & Co. He is to become a local representative.

D. D. Rawill of the W. S. Duncan sales staff is attracting as much attention after the trip by his sidekick, W. C. Gandy, as he deserves. He has made his home and headquarters at Atlanta, Ga., where he is representing traveling salesmen and his brother, A. C. Miller, of John Silvey & Co.

G. A. Zellner and E. D. Hugley, of the Murphy-O'F Co., are spending today in Atlanta, Ga., October 13, 1913.

The travelers of Jones Brothers & Co. were taking orders for vinegar, pickles and preserves last week as follows: R. E. Gilmore, Atlanta, Ga.; L. C. Dawson at Tampa, Fla.; and C. W. Miller at Harrison, Tenn.

R. B. Jones, the south Carolina traveler, has returned from St. Louis, Mo., where he went to visit his company's plant to see what he couldn't hurry up shipments for him. So he rushed home with orders this fall that it would take him to supply customers all over the country and keep running night and day and shipments are being rushed out as fast as possible. Jones stopped over at Nashville and Knoxville and visited the fairs in progress at those places.

"Working on the Levee" with the Atlanta Spirit.

The folks out in Mississippi and that section are mighty anxious to get the levees in shape for flood-protection.

They have not only whirled into the matter themselves, but they've got their neighbors interested as well.

They're asking the U. S. Government to make a big enough appropriation to complete the levee system upon which they have already spent something like $70,000,000 themselves.

Of course ATLANTA is glad to take a hand. ATLANTA forever!

So our Atlanta Clearing House the other day—big, strong, representative—sits down and writes a letter, signed by every member, urging the Government to do the right thing by Mississippi and the adjacent states.

"Since the people living in these states," said the letter,

"have already spent nearly $70,000,000 in their effort to cope with the floods, we feel that it is only right and just for the Government to come forth and furnish the necessary $60,000,000 to complete the levee system, which will bring into cultivation millions of acres of the richest land in the world, now undeveloped, and which will add to the nation annually eight times the amount of the expenditure necessary to protect these lands. We earnestly desire to lend our co-operation in this matter."

We have two reasons for telling you this. The first is that it sets off the advantage of PULL-TOGETHER.

The second is that there are REAL REASONS for the very kind of PULL-TOGETHER indicated in the above.

Atlanta sees the need of her neighbor and she pitches in to help. She does it unselishly. And yet—

Because we are all so bound together in the common life of our own section, so much a part of the warp and woof of one another's interests, Atlanta will some day share the benefit of Mississippi's inevitable prosperity.

Verily, CO-OPERATION is the word!

It is the one essential of Atlanta's own success.

Its results are evident, whether we want Grand Opera or a Shriners' Convention; whether we go out after a new crop of sky-scrappers or some levees for our flood-menaced neighbors.

Why shouldn't it show BEST OF ALL in a good, strong increase of business between you dealers who sell goods and us manufacturers who produce them right here in the same town and state and section?

Plainly put, that's exactly what we're after.

We are paying good money to talk to you retailers about our goods, and asking you to stock them.

The ATLANTA-MADE argument is strong. Atlanta is your town, your investment—just the same as it is ours. Georgia is your state, your home—just the same as it is ours.

The CO-OPERATIVE argument is plain logic. You can't escape it if you really think. We are literally feeders to one another.

But after all, the One Best Argument is the MERIT of our products.

The One Sure Thing is the advantage to you in using our product.

If you could get better goods than we make or better values than we offer; if you could get shorter hauls or quicker action; if you could get prompter attention or more attractive terms than you can from us—we would go ahead.

But brother, you'll have to travel far and seek long before you can beat what we can do for you right here in little old Atlanta.

Our goods are at your very doors. We are your neighbors in business. You can see our wares and you can see US. We stand close up, ready to make good all the time. We back you up by advertising to the consumer.

There isn't one of us but is proud of his product.

We're not particularizing on descriptions of them in this bulletin—that's not the intention of the thing. We're just asking you as a plain, straightforward proposition to give us your CO-OPERATION by stocking and selling our ATLANTA-MADE stuff.

Our local trade needs the levee that nothing but dealer-co-operation, YOUR co-operation, can build.

And when the levee is built, EVERYBODY gets the benefit of it.

DIVIDEND PRIZES

THE CIRCLE PUZZLE

MAKE THEM WORTH
WHAT YOU PLEASE

The Problem

The problem is to count the circles. Every circle is complete and intersects or touches one or more other circles. There are no parts of circles or shams or deceptions of any sort in the puzzle. In the event that no one counts the exact number the prizes will be awarded for the nearest correct solutions. Accuracy and patience are the main requisites for arriving at the correct or nearest count. Those who display these qualifications to the best advantage will solve the puzzle best.

How to Enter

This contest is restricted to people residing in the states of Georgia, Alabama, North and South Carolina, Florida and Mississippi.

A copy of the subscription to The Atlanta Journal, from $1.10 to $6.00 for the Daily and Sunday edition, or from $1.00 to $6.00 for the Semi-Weekly edition, to The Journal, entitles a competitor to submit a solution of the puzzle. The amount of money paid will cover the subscription price for the paper, according to the regular rate, whether by mail or by mail.

MANY DIFFERENT SOLUTIONS MAY BE SUBMITTED AS THE CONTESTANT'S PAYMENT FOR SUBMITTING AN ADDITIONAL PAYMENT WITH EACH ONE, BUT NOT MORE THAN $4.00 CAN BE PAID WITH ANY ONE SOLUTION.

It is not necessary to pay the same amount with each solution if more than one is submitted. As the main prizes have an added value according to what is paid in on a subscription with the winning solution, contestants should familiarize themselves with the dividend schedule before sending in their solutions.

Solutions, by check, money order, registered letter or in one or two-cent stamps. Solutions unaccompanied by cash subscriptions will not be registered. The contest is open to both old and new subscribers within the territory designated.

Whatever is paid, whether on one or a number of solutions, will apply on a continuous payment to The Atlanta Journal. No one associated with The Journal in any way will be allowed to enter this contest.

Territory and Subscription Price

Only persons residing in the territory designated below are entitled to compete. No solution from territory outside the prescribed limits will be registered. The states of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina and Mississippi.

6.00 wins	280.00	6.00 wins	310.00

Deciding Ties

In case of ties, a second puzzle will be presented. This puzzle will be practical and solvable. Only those ties will be admitted to solve puzzle No. 2. No tie will be admitted to accompany this solution. The second puzzle will be printed but twice, and those tied will have a week in which to solve it. Mail subscribers at a distance, if tied, will receive the second puzzle. They will receive the second puzzle, the time to be determined by postmarks.

In case of other ties, a third puzzle, also perfectly solvable, will be printed. It will be selected to the second, as the second. The second and third puzzles will be used in case of ties. Their purpose will be merely to decide ties, so that in the event there is a tie, the prizes will be awarded without having to divide them or without resorting to a fourth puzzle.

However, only three puzzles will be presented, and in the seemingly impossible event of still another tie, the prizes tied will be equally divided between those tying.

If there are no ties, there will be only one puzzle.

No prizes will be distributed until the contest is finally decided.

Special Conditions

Should there be any tie, as many prizes will be reserved as there are people tied before any prizes are awarded to those sending less correct solutions. That is, if two people tied on the absolutely correct answer, they would have to solve the second puzzle to determine which was the better. The person who solved it first would be entitled to the first prize. This rule will apply generally.

While the winning of a prize does not depend upon the time the solution is sent, the time will be considered in case of ties. The solution must be sent in time to be eligible for the prize. The time to do is to begin counting at once. Send in your solution, and if you later you have made a mistake, send in another. There is no limit to the number of solutions that may be submitted.

All those entering the contest will, as a condition, be required to abide by the ruling of the Contest Manager. In the event of any questions arising, the Contest Manager, if he deems it wise, may appoint a committee to assist him in deciding them, and those entering the contest do so with the understanding that such decision is final.

Cut out this blank smoothly and send it with your solution and money.

COTTON PICKING TIME IN GEORGIA:

NA BATHMON, Georgia, thirty miles from the south, looked out this morning through the drifting mist and grime of the town's heart, and thought of some time in the October sun when there crept a puff of warm air, treated with the breath of falling leaves, over the green fields dotted with bursting bolls.

"It's cotton pickin' time in Georgia," said Sidney Lauder to himself. And he turned from the gray world outside to the ink-smeared table and the dreams of Dixie. And he sat down and wrote the music and sang the words of the "Chattahoochee."

How many exiles strayed in a strange port have the words "cotton pickin' time in Georgia" wrought the picture of white fields below the autumn sunset and the croon of the pickers' song? How many must have sat in their homes and the longing to tread again the dry earth between the rows of whitened stalks.

Where Cotton Rules
One is home-coming again, and the days of cotton picking. To many, perhaps, the memory of home-coming brings thoughts of the shadow or the thistle or of pain. But the heart strings can pull stronger than those of the Georgian who has been plowing and sowing, tilling and plucked the fleecy threads through the nazy days of the Indian summer.

Cotton Pickin' Time
To a Georgian born and bred it is a season with much significance as Christmas. This year, for cotton is truly long in Dixie and your little southern lad's life has been spent away from the time he was old enough to romp on to the "cotton house" and healthily take a delicate dusty roll in the bilowy white stuff.

Cotton picking time. To a Georgian born and bred it is a season with much significance as Christmas. This year,

For cotton is truly long in Dixie and your little southern lad's life has been spent away from the time he was old enough to romp on to the "cotton house" and healthily take a delicate dusty roll in the bilowy white stuff.

Shadow on the Cotton Patch
But already there is a shadow over the cotton patch. Ruthless progress is prophesying the end of the picture. "Labor-saving" is tolling the death knell of cotton picking time in Georgia.

Cotton growing, an industry so old that its birth is hidden in the mists of history, for many years has been the only phase of agriculture that has changed but little before the sun.

Today Georgia harvests her cotton even as did the Hindus in the days of Kinn. Picked by hand, the cotton is sold in its rawness. But steam-driven machines which already have invaded the wheat fields of the west, are encroaching on the realm of King Cotton. It may not be long before the cotton picker will yield his place to the cotton picker, genus mechanicus.

There is in Atlanta a man who has invented an automatic cotton picker, a sort of suction-pipe affair, which, operated by the power of steam, can do the work of many more.

This machine and many others have been the dream of inventors, but no one ever thought to draw the fleecy cotton from its prison in the boll. As yet, none of them are known, save from realization, but the day will surely come when hand-labor will give way before machinery.

With the passing of the dainty cotton picker, there will fade into the vanished country many another gay relic of cotton picking time in Georgia. Already the quilting party and the corn husking have disappeared throughout the countryside, are wrapped in memory's mists.

And with the coming of steel and steam, the last vestiges of the cotton picking frolic, a bonny custom of a bonny land.

Fall comes, a rich Georgia planter can sit under the tree when he "sparkled" his sweet-heart at a genuine cotton picking by the light of the yellow harvest moon. Flooded the white fields and the young folks of the county gathered at a gathering where all were brave and merry doings.

From the time the saucy face of the moon man peeped over the same pine trees, when man

high in the pitchy zenith, the boys and girls were busy in the rows, stuffing sacks with the fluffy strands that were so easily gathered in the soft light from the heavy bolls.

He worked with a will, and when "quittin' time" came at 10 o'clock, there was ever a monster pile to testify to their sturdy efforts, and round were the jollies of hand-drawn dancing on the spacious floor of the barn, "ringing parades" until far after midnight when there would always be the ride home with your best girl through the silent mystic night, with perhaps a few stars to guide you in the shadows of the rose vine over the front porch.

The Great and Proud

No wonder that Sidney Lauder, dying in Baltimore, imagined for certain that time in Georgia, no wonder that there is regret mingled with the pride of progress, no wonder should every white man be proud of that streak of steel, that would slash the place of little hand that sometimes strayed over the bolls on the night of a cotton frolic.

The Golden Pool

BY ROBERT W. CHAMBERS
Illustrated By Jay Barnum

(Copyright, 1907, by Robert W. Chambers)

THIS doctor, finding his patient's quarters untenantable for the first time in many years, had come down from the veranda, where he discovered a lean, soldier-looking young fellow clad in flannel shirt and trousers, and resting.

"Oh, my enterprising friend!" he said.

"What mischief are you hatching?"

"I'm going to try for big trout in the Golden Pool," said his patient calmly.

The unlooked-for energy appeared to embarrass the doctor. His green mouth tightened.

"I know it, but I'm going."

"Against my orders?" demanded the doctor sharply.

"With pleasure," replied the young man, gayly. "It's your own doing, too. Do you remember who you were last night?"

"I saw I'd a big fish rising in that pool," growled the doctor.

"Exactly, and that has more to do with you than all your purple pills for peculiar people."

"Now what the devil possesses you for the Golden Pool at this particular minute?" demanded the vexed doctor.

"I've been an invalid for a year and a half, and you think we don't what I told you."

His patient continued to laugh that bright, light-headed, infectious laugh which the doctor had not heard in more than a month, and he looked at him with a smile.

"All the same, you're not well yet, and you know it," he said.

"My aversion to women?"

"You mean my memory still fails me? Well, then, what do you think about this morning?"

"What?" inquired the doctor, suddenly.

I went out to the stables and recognized Phelan and Riley! How's that for a start? They—he glided past him, and the young man sauntered pattered about among the petunias—"there's Dawson, isn't he? And there's Mrs. Phelan! How's that? Is it? Besides, he added, "my aversion to women is disappearing; I saw a girl on the lake from the window this morning. Who is she?"

"Was she dressed in white?" asked the doctor.

"Don't remember."

"No—no, I don't know. I didn't see her."

"So it seems you can't recall the back of a relative or neighbor that you have seen since you left?"

"Relative? Nonsense, he laughs, having a good time. As for the neighbors, give me time, for heaven's sake! I'm doing beautfully. There are millions of us here, and there's nothing to worry now—funny dashes of memory—hints of the past, vague glimmers of the present, but nothing—absolutely nothing—yet of that blank year. Was it a year?"

"How long was it?" asked his patient, wistfully.

"Sixty years."

"You said I was shot, I think."

"No, I didn't. You think you were, but it was done with a Malay bullet, and you can remember about it?"

The young man stood silent, frowning with his hands clasped.

The doctor, who had begun to pace the veranda, waited and gazed at him with a smile.

"I'll tell you why I didn't want you to go to the Golden Pool," he said.

"A trespasser? A stranger?" She

"Well, why?"

"I'm sorry," replied the doctor, watching him. "They fish in the pools, and they use your canoe, and I don't want you to worry."

"I do not worry," said the young man, laughing.

"That is all," he said, "if you can, invite her to dinner. She's a friend of mine."

"The doctor started across the meadow.

Suddenly, beyond the sprayed undergrowth, he caught a glow of sunlight, a glimpse of that rich, sunny foliage which marks the Golden Pool, and now the familiar water lay glittering through the trees, and he began his descent, skipping stones like a deer.

He parted the thicket. There was no canoe there, nothing except a boat, and that was his.

"What was this?" he said.

He stared stupidly for a moment, and then stepped through the bushes to the bank of the stream. A canoe glittered out there, pulled up on a flat, sunny rock in mid-stream, and upon the rock lay a girl in a flowing dress, drying her hair in the sun.

Instantly an odd sense of it all having happened before seized him again, and he sat on the bank, the slim figure lying there.

He sat there, twisting his slender fingers, until his eyes again brought him into direct line of vision. They stared at one another across the still water.

Instantly he thought

FULTON COUNTY TOWER THE STORIES OF TRAGEDY, PATHOS AND HUMOR

By Ward S. Greene

On the north side of the state capitol runs another street, Franklin, the Washington street ridge its rough cobble stones bump downward sharply for a hundred yards or so before they swell upward to another ridge.

In this cup running between the two ridges is Butler street, and twenty paces north on Butler street from the corner of Franklin is a pile of granite stone that has needed three years to move. Bound in front by an old railroad yard, riotous with weeds, the black mouth of the bridged highway on one side, and the jutting shoulder of an uncompleted bridge on the other, the Fulton county jail is almost hidden in this little valley. The battlemented tower alone struggles upward out of the dust and grime to peep a little outside the world.

It is an unlucky end to gaze from the topmost cells of cells on the fourth floor out toward the city; he could see but little save the street, in front, hazy with dust in the October sunlight, the heads writhing under the coal cars, the steam, and up the hill the dome of the capitol building gleaming above the green trees.

How many eyes must have gazed wistfully between the bars at the great gray stone! How many eyes have turned back to compare the strength of the steel that girded them in. With the low cot, the hard, chill floor, the light green bricks in the ceaseless walls.

IF WALLS COULD SPEAK.

If these walls could speak, what stories they have to tell! How many women have looked down upon them since they have been hung upon them? Some sobbing out the still hours of the night, some sitting dazed and sodden, another crouched in the corner of his cell, shuddering with terror like those of a hunted animal.

Those walls have seen fifteen murderers wait wide-eyed for the day that brought them death, they have seen half a dozen white men shoot through a hole in the floor while a hundred spectators watched.

And again they have seen prisoners laugh, smoke contentedly, joke each other and sing the old home songs. They have seen a mountain bride and groom live for weeks, honey-mooneers in a prison paradise. They have seen the same mountain bride disown him in one word, the groom sick with the mumps in another.

BRIDEGROOM AND MURDERER.

Hardly a year ago the bridegroom and the murderer sat within a few feet of each other, the one sitting off the wall, the other in the center.

When a man and his little baby were slain a year ago among the hills of Fannin county, officers rushed to the scene, sought vainly for the slayer, and instead seized young Harley Ballou and held him a week as witness in the case.

Their honeymoon was nipped in the bud and they were hustled off to Fulton county. Fulton county's jail was full when they arrived, and the only way open to the log-cabin couple in the "condemned cell," high on the fourth floor, the thickness of a layer of brick between them and the little room where death lurked.

In a cell immediately across theirs, though it was not yet set, sat the man condemned to swing in that same little room. Above bride and groom whiled away the hours laughing, singing, talking, as merry as though it was all in the day's work to spend a honeymoon in jail. Below, the condemned man sat silent day after day, night after night.

If Clay was feigning insanity he did it well. His last hope of reprieve gone, the date of his execution near day by day, his mask of silence more complete than ever he is said to have been in. His jailer brought him the morning coffee, the story goes. Clay stuck his finger in it, looked up with the wishful gaze of a child.

"He's crazy," argued his friends. "He can't talk. That fellow shouldn't have been allowed to go free."

As you are shown through the various wards you are struck with the cleanliness and freshness of everything about the jail. The air is clean, the grates door and windows, surely they are hard to keep clean, and with some of the prisoners on the colored side doubly hard to keep sanitary, yet not once during the odor of dirt or sewage offend you.

The top floor is by far the most interesting in the building. Here are located the kitchen, the federal prison, and the tower will be as interesting as one of the domes of the capitol, although the interest will be within, not without.

STRANGE VISITORS.

Stand for a few moments at the entrance to the jail and you will find a great variety of visitors pass beneath the portal. Here are three white-haired ladies, a deep compassion in the eyes of them. Their arms are filled with printed pamphlets. Twice a week they come to the jail to do missionary work among the inmates.

They are followed, perhaps, by a young fellow who is there to see his brother, bringing to him a magazine or a muchcoveted chew-of tobacco.

There is a package for "Bill" and husband on. A little girl comes running up with another package and whiskys away. An automobile drives up, a doctor steps out. He has come to see a sick prisoner. All others are welcome, and every girl smiles at the jailer and is graciously admitted.

"And who is that?" you ask him, and perhaps he will tell you who she is and how she daily comes to see him and talk over with him his chance of getting a pardon from the governor.

Clay was silent still. Early the next day friends and relatives gathered to the condemned man's cell. They were singing with him, praying with him. The hands of the prison clock crawled around the white dial more slowly than human flesh could endure.

The silence of seven months was broken and a moment later Robert L. Clay sobbed out the confession of his love making and the voice rose high above all others in the hymns and prayers. Before 1 o'clock he had paid the penalty of his deed.

Clay was the last white man hanged in Fulton county. One negro has been hanged since—Oscar Dowsberry, who also went to his death with a song and a prayer on his lips.

A MIDNIGHT GET-AWAY.

From the very cell where Clay spent his long term of silence was made one of the few escapes from the Fulton county tower.

Sitting there in the still hours of the night they hatched out a scheme of escape. First, on the outside came to their assistance, a fellow secured. Night after night when the warden finished his rounds they alternated in working at the bars, working one minute, watching the next.

At last the opportunity came when the last bar was sawed. All was ready. Five blankets were torn to shreds and knotted together in a long rope.

The bars were wrenched away, and one by one those five crawled into the narrow space and zig-zagged down the tall like stalks. A length of ramie blanket, fluttering in the wind, told the tale next morning.

Cunningly contrived and executed as the escape was, it was a valuable lesson. They were out; immediately there were in. And now a visitor to the tower will find a solid wall of masonry where once a few bars were easily wrenchable.

Right now in the Fulton county tower are lodged more guests than in any hotel in Atlanta. If one cares to make the trip down to Butler street and gets Jailer Golden's permission, the tower will be as interesting as one of the domes of the capitol, although the interest will be within, not without.

THE PANKHURST WAY AS ATLANTA SUFFRAGETTES SEE IT

WITH the arrival of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst in America, women's suffrage, especially militant suffrage, looms big, not only to American women who want the ballot, but also to many men.

"The Pankhurst Way" has been scored here and glorified there. At least, so it seems to us in their opinions of it. Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association, says: "Mrs. Pankhurst and her followers are justified in their militant tactics. Mrs. Amelia R. Woodall, president of the Atlanta Association, agrees with her.

But these two suffrage leaders think of the "Pankhurst Way" is herein given, together with the opinion of Miss Katherine Koch, corresponding secretary of the Georgia Association.

What Mrs. Pankhurst herself thinks of her "way" is perhaps the most interesting view of all. She was called to judge and jury at her last trial, when she was convicted of inciting English suffragettes to riot, and sentenced to three years in prison. She delivered a most dramatic and convincing argument in her defense and at the same time an address teeming with fire and pathos.

She did not say many words. Her views were on marriage laws, on the way men treat women in general, she told the jury. Her speech was the official speech of the platform of the English militant. If you would know what all the "row" is in Great Britain, you would get a view of the "Pankhurst Way" as the lady herself sees it, there is no clearer explanation.

MRS. PANKHURST'S SPEECH.

Here is the "cause" from its leader's view, as the girl delivered in the trial. It's worth reading. My lord, gentlemen of the jury, when you are summing up your verdict to me, that I might in justice object to each of you took your place, because in this country it is an accepted fact that every Englishman is tried by his peers. No woman is tried by her peers. You are the ones who are to decide my case. I decided not to challenge you because, after all, these trials afford us, at a very high cost, a means of getting into the minds of the men who try us—who are human as we are—some idea of our condition, of their condition, about the laws to which they have to submit, although they had no part in making those laws.

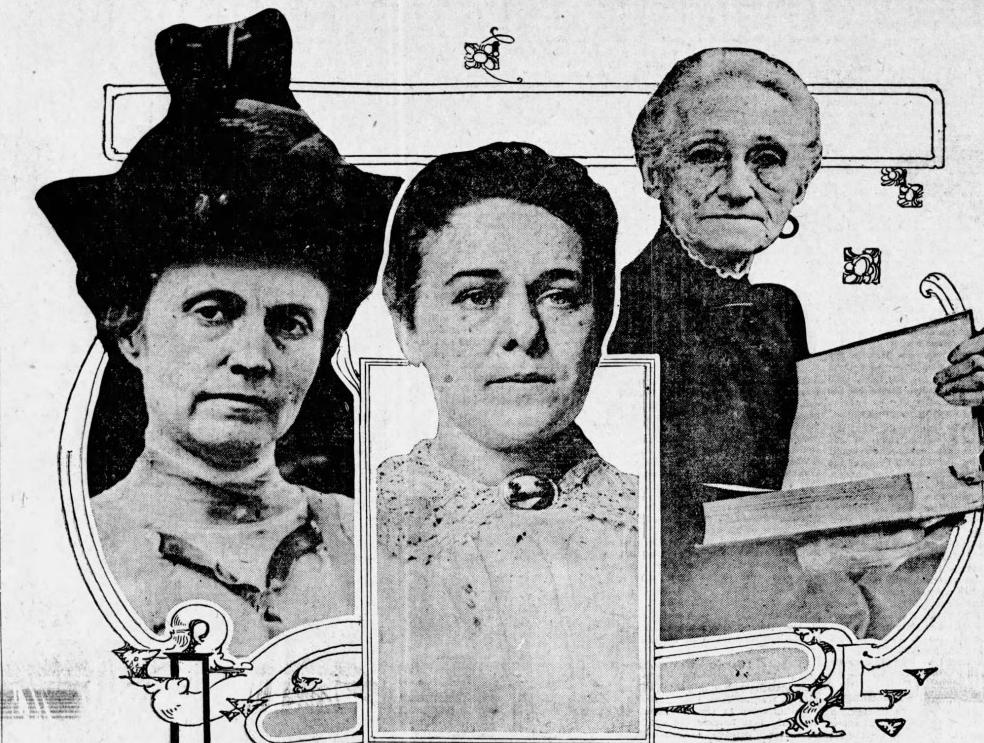

My lord, I propose to say a few words about the prosecution and the way in which it was conducted. I feel I must say, first of all, a little about the speech of counsel for the prosecution. He failed to notice rather his words conveyed the suggestion—that I am a woman incapable of doing to myself what entailed imprisonment and great suffering, while I think myself protected from such a fate.

Mr. Bodkin knows perfectly well that I have shared the dangers these women have shared, that I have tried to avenge three times. While there I was treated like an ordinary criminal.

Now I have spoken of personal matters, but many suggestions have been made not only here but in the houses of commoners, that I have made money out of this movement and, as evidence, that I own a motor car. I can say no more, for I have never owned one. The union to which I belong owns a motor car for the organization, and I am not connected with it. I would say in passing that it is very difficult in this country for a woman to buy a motor car, and to inherit property. There is only one trade that I know of in which women are allowed to buy a motor car, and that is the abominable trade of selling to the vicious pleasure of rich men.

My part in the movement has cost me a considerable portion of my income, but I have never underwritten a very important part of my income to this movement. I am not connected with it. I do not believe that I have ever been forced to pay for the expenses of the American National Women's Suffrage Association, and their methods, while not condoned, are not condemned either.

The Englishman is a different man from an American, and perhaps he needs a different treatment to get the same results. I cannot blame Mrs. Pankhurst for militancy, although I think she will never get what she after that way."

MRS. AMELIA R. WOODALL

MISS KATHERINE KOCH

MRS. MARY L. MCLENDON

WHAT MRS. MCLENDON THINKS

Mrs. Mary L. McLendon expresses the following opinion on Mrs. Pankhurst's tactics:

"Women have the right to fight for their rights just as men have. In 1776 the American colonists fought for their mother country, and they wanted their rights. In '61 the south fought to maintain its interpretation of southern rights. It is women's right to have the ballot, and she is justified in fighting for it.

"I do not believe that women should be so like those in England, that we will be forced to militancy. I do not know the exact conditions in England, but in my opinion they are sufficient to justify Mrs. Pankhurst and the many in her actions. Their cause is to be the American National Women's Suffrage Association, and their methods, while not condoned, are not condemned either."

no man either in parliament or out anxious to alter that law; that little girl is marriageable, considered old enough to be the mother of children, considered fit to accept responsibility for her acts, so dreadful, so disastrous, so dreadful, that we feel ourselves justified in using very strong measures indeed in order to get power to alter the law.

I may be sent, if you give me guilty, to a very long term of penal servitude, but if I am found guilty of perjury, it would be a sentence of 14 years penal servitude. That is the kind of law that is made to protect the innocent, to protect the weak, to protect the poor, to protect the helpless. The laws of this country are not constituted equal legal guardians of the children with their fathers.

Women for many years now, Lord, have been trying to get equal power of guardianship with the fathers over the children. They have been trying to get the maximum punishment for certain injuries to the moral and physical health of the child, and the law's imprisonment. We think that there is no crime greater than the corruption of the physical life, and the moral life, of little girls, and we are well aware that. We have been taught that our duty is to protect our public integrity we must hold dear.

MISS KOCH'S VIEW

The views of Miss Katherine Koch: "I do not think Mrs. Pankhurst or the militant suffragettes are justified in burning and smashing as they are reported to do. While I believe that many decent people feel that a woman's right to vote is a natural right that belongs there, and while I do not know all the provisos that may drive them to their alleged deceptions, I cannot conceive of any conceivable attitude that would result in such militant attitudes. They are absurd."

"There will never be any window smashing in America. The American citizen is different from John Bull, and it will never be necessary to smash windows. And right now American women have accomplished more toward gaining the ballot than the English suffragettes. The way of peace may be the longest way, but it is the only way."

"I am disappointed that Mrs. Pankhurst could not come to Atlanta. I would like to have heard her speak, because I believe that she could have told the women of Atlanta the true condition of affairs that drove English women to militancy."

zens, armed with the power that ordains them to act in this agitation, and I want to say to you, gentlemen, that so long as you have that power, so long as you allow these things to go on, so long as you are driven to take the law into their own hands. If there is in the law and the administration of the law so much as a slight set between women's feelings and men's feelings on moral matters, that gives a justification for what we are doing."

Now there was a time in the history of Ireland when the law became so bad as to be obnoxious to the masses of the people. Men at that time did not have the vote. It was impossible to get a man to a trial, to convict people found guilty of breaches of the law, because the constitutional amendment granting her the vote had not been realized.

The law went to the point where very much lighter in many cases than are inflicted on women found guilty in this situation.

JAILED SIX WEEKS.

I was sent to Holloway prison the day after the trials for breaking a pane of glass, and the court ordered me to stand over, while a man in a city I know very well, a man of high position, was sent for six weeks.

There were four little girls. These are the reasons that have made women take part in this agitation.

what this means to the future of the children of this country. I ask you to take this question very seriously. Only other women have had information brought to me that there is in this country, in the very heart of it, a large illegal traffic, not only in women but children, in little children; they are being trained to make them into prostitutes.

HUNGER STRIKE.

With these are the things that have made women to do this. Let me see this thing out to the end, let me cost what it may. And if you can do this, my dearest friends, I tell you frankly that that battle is not over. It is long or short, I shall not submit to it. I shall, the moment I leave this court, if I am still here, I shall join the women who are already in Holloway on the hunger strike, and shall call out of prison dead or alive, at the end of this moment; and once out again, as soon as I am physically fit I shall enter this again.

Life is very dear to all of us; I am not seeking to commit suicide. I am seeking to save the women of this country enfranchised. These are the feelings by which we are animated. We often ourselves as sacrifices, just as our forefathers did in the past, and I would ask you all to put this question to yourselves: Is it right that another human being, being to death because that is his duty, to condemn another human being to death because that is his right to judge women? If it were a man I would take the position of a judge in Ireland, who, when a girl came to him, said she was to be placed before him, said:

"Where is the man?" And when the man was not forthcoming, he refused to pass sentence on the girl. That is what I ask you to do to my own sex.

You know every one of you, that I should not be standing here, that I should not break a single law in this country, that I should not be being to death because that is my duty to the women of this country. I had a share in electing those who make laws for us, and I have a voice in the election of our members of parliament. I have called upon to pay. And as to you to whom is this situation, that women of upright life are trying to get the right of suffrage, to get the votes that men have made, because, after all, men are responsible for the present state of things.

ONLY JUSTICE.

You are not accustomed to deal with people like me, the ordinary people of your districts, who are called upon to deal with people who break the law from selfish motives. We have no personal end to serve, neither have any of the other women who have gone through this court during the past few weeks, like sheep to the slaughter. Not one of these women would be here if she had not been compelled to be here. They are women who seriously believe that the welfare of humanity depends upon the enforcement of the law. Now, I ask you to consider that the terrible evils which are ravaging our civilization will never be removed until women get the right to vote.

You know that the hours of life are being poisoned; they know that houses are being destroyed; that homes are being broken up; that children are being starved; that rape is on the increase, because of the unequal standard of morals, even the mothers and children are tortured by one of the world's most terrible institutions that ravage humanity.

There is only one way to get a woman to obey the law. It is not by deporting us; it is not by locking us in jail; it is by doing as Justice Fred M. James did.

And so I ask you to consider that the law is not to be given a verdict unless the whole agitation. I ask you to find me not guilty of malicious incitement to a woman to do this.

These are my last words. My indictment is not malicious. It is not by deporting us; it is not by locking us in jail; it is by doing as Justice Fred M. James did.

SEARCHED NINETEEN YEARS FOR MISSING BROTHER.

SPOKANE, Wash.—Miss Frances G. James, of Spokane, Wash., has been searching for her brother, Fred M. James, age forty-four, who is reported to have made a fortune mining in the coal fields of British Columbia, Canada, and to have changed his residence from the coal fields to the Rockies.

She came to the city yesterday to search for him. She has been searching for nineteen years.

Frances G. James, wife of Fred M. James, age forty-four, who is reported to have made a fortune mining in the coal fields of British Columbia, Canada, and to have changed his residence from the coal fields to the Rockies.

A London clergyman says that 60 percent of married women in his parish are breadwinners, and supporting their husbands as well as their children. When you think of the number of maid-servants in a house, it is evident that many of them are breadwinners.

Mr. Amelia R. Woodall gives the following as her idea on "Pankhurstism":

"I do not believe in breaking law to establish law. Peace and arbitration are the only ways we can have our ideals. We do not endorse Mrs. Pankhurst and her methods, which are the opposite.

"The average mind which we are trying to convert fails to understand between Mrs. Pankhurst's methods and her methods. The minds of the people are closed against suffrage and they class Mrs. Pankhurst in the same catalogue with Carrie Nation.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME EDITED by MARION HARLAND

BURN YOUR OWN SMOKE.

MY world make particularly grieved and angry day wisdom from the pen of a master animal lover.

say James M. Harland. "The first step in life is to burn our own smoke. That, not to inflict upon outsiders our personal sorrows and petty miseries; not to keep thinking of ourselves as exceptional cases."

Ever since railway and steamship companies came along the world received the influence of soft coal fires and plausible

handicrafts which have been the source of infinite好处 whereby each engine shall burn its own smoke. Yet factories and automobiles burn their own smoke

as well as a wretched minority.

It is not many years ago that, in devoting over a month to the subject, I exposed the secret of the largest manufacturing cities in America, my attention was called by the best of a glorious number of manufacturers to the dire effects indicated by his message. I kept a crimson smudge upon the streets gathered low in the west.

"Do you know?" I asked him, queried I,

"I should not recognize it."

"I assure you it is a good specimen—for a Minnesota coal region. We learn hereabout to take life and distorted nature as it is."

"As long as burning our own

smoke is a Utopia dream we must con-

cent ourselves with seeing sun, moon, and stars through our cloudy darkness."

Fat of Life's Lessons.

It is philosophy, Christian education, and all the rest that bring the like consideration to bear upon the moral world? We hear daily repetitions of the frazzled adage, "We are what we eat." And we know that we would not be utterly out of patience with the world and our fellow creatures.

To the best of my knowledge the first of life's lessons to be the duty of making things smooth and clearing the way for us to live and move and have our being.

The singular metaphor as abruptly as the post-escapist dispenses with it, let us down to the question, What right or wrong has the author of all the world under his family, neighbor, or friend by bestowing, much less parading, his personal temper and attitude? What right or wrong has the doctor in his diagnosis of the disease? If I have a grumbling toothache and circumstances prevent me from going to the dentist, what right or wrong has the dentist in his failure to be relieved by keeping the whole family aware of his infirmity and rendering useless upon his system the best of medical advice? If I have for one of us poignant recollections that will not down, fight them where we may, and if my wife has a toothache and I am indeed does that hides the ghastly thing and hold her tongue with regard to growing more and more sensitive?

Said a wise and tender counselor to me in the earlier stages of a great grief:

"Dear child, friends are ready with sympathy now. By and by the thoughts of one to oblige another to share the nuisance

knew that the heart and soul of each devoted wife were oppressed as by actual calamity. The father, too, had a trying day in store.

A clerk has been careless, or a partner unscrupulous, or a customer failed to pay a big overdue

Or a college girl, who is unworthy of a man she loves, and who is unworthy of the happiness of others. It is un-brought to the test of the highest tribunal,

it is a violation of justice. On each occa-

PARIS SUITS for FALL WEAR.

PARTY—(Special Correspondence.)—Everybody is materially better off than on the farm, but now we are learning which way to turn, whether ahead or backward. And it is a difficult position, however you look at it. Are we going to be dined over and outdone all winter, or are we going home to somewhat clinging with long coat effects? We will not know for certain until the weather will not begin at the beginning of the big day races when the fashionable folk, with their hats and canary-colored coats and collars to wear whatever one of these two styles they will elect to take up. No matter what is said about modern fashions, there is no question that the coat is a forth and so on. The real mode is not fixed and sealed until those women who absolutely set the fashions have done so.

Personally I feel sure the panthered and crinolined skirt is coming in and that gradually it will be more and more worn, but I am afraid it will prefer for all kinds of cold weather another question, is what is known as the street suits that are giving the straight frocks for afternoon affairs and the houses, will most certainly be provided with these new draperies, but will women forego the straight silhouette? That is another question.

Materials in Street Suits

Materials for Street Cleaning.
As street cloths are the first necessity of the autumn wardrobe there must be the first things to be considered and written of. Naturally the different materials are what should be thought of first and this year there are so many as to be thought of and such beautiful cloths as to be a real treat to the eye. The variety in rating, velours, cotton velvets, plushes, and all fabrics that show a soft raised surface is greater than ever before and these will be worn to the exclusion of all dull or hard surfaced goods.

The latest model of everything intended for the street is a sort of plush which is made to represent fur, like mink, marten, or ermine, and presents a tremendous volume against the winter. The baby lamb and moleskin are, of course, the only practical ones, for the other eminences are only used for trimming, but the others are simply perfect for the body. The stuff is light and airy, not nearly so heavy as even the real baby lamb, and it will be used for coats and skirts, which may be made to fit one's size as one wishes and still be comfortable for walking.

One model in the black baby lamb that I have seen recently showed the effect that I am referring to. The effect itself is only to be found in the exact quality of the holding, and so perfect was it that it was only by the hair, and in the hand that the imitation could be detected. The skirt was the most difficult part to get right, as there was no waist to hem in the back, and extended from the waist to the hem and was wide enough to reach almost to the point of the hips at the sides. In front there was a little fullness at the sides which extended to the back, and this was the side of the overskirt was then basted under and held in place. Thereafter the basting wire in this overskirt scarcely enough to hold it, but it just ripped out on the main seam so that it did not stay.

Of course every woman will have a dark blue costume for the street if she is a wife and a dark green one for her, for that of all others is the color that gives the most satisfaction in the wearing, lasting, and if it must be washed, a more or less bright color is the least noticeable of anything that can be adopted, but if more than the one tailored suit can be afforded, then the color of this should be either red or brown. There are eight shades of each color, ranging through a range of shades that is almost endless, and one or another tint that is not becoming there is a third, and a fourth, or a twenty-fourth, if one will take the trouble.

so bright as those shades of red for winter are not so bright as those that have been worn this last summer, and the difference in the quality of the material makes them seem darker, or rather it gives them a more sombre appearance. There is nothing more becoming to a vast number of women than some of the good dull red shades, when the fabric is velour or lame, or ramee, and this the dressmakers have recognized, and they have made up for about one-half of all the reds. Some are made of striped goods, two shades appearing in the stripes, which are generally in the same color, nearly always, so that the effect is like that of a mottled material, and larger

In it is a chandelier made of a shade that is nearly red, but some of the shades are old fashioned seal color for the next hints of mahogany and a glistening gold for the highlights. An odd idea now is the combination of this pattern shade with a mandarin color, a combination that would not be artistic, but when it is carried or in some of the beautiful fabrics that are all in or tint or in some of the wonderful oriental brocades is perfect.

Ratine de Soie New Material.
For afternoon frocks there has just been brought out a new material called "ratine de soie," a stuff that looks like crêpe de chine on one side and the thinnest of ratine or velour de laine on the other. One can imagine how beautifully soft and supple this goods is, and that it will be greatly used and tremendously popular I am sure. I have seen it used for costumes, or rather frocks that have two and three paniers, and these have been full and still the gown

A true winter suit this, no less rugged than it is practical. The shirt has a small amount of fullness put into the waistband, this being continued down the back. Otherwise it is cut straight. The plaid is a very attractive one, consisting of a fairly deep shade of green bordered off with red, black, and white. The trousers are made of green and have made extremely loose, the wide band, which is placed fairly low at the back and raised high at the front, holding it in slightly below the bust. The belt is of black velvet trimmed with gold braid. The hat is of black velvet, primed with crimson.

The hat is of black velvet, trimmed with coque pompons.

In one model of this material, the color being sauge, the paniers were arranged only in the back with a little at the sides, and the front falling straight. These paniers were not put on separately, but were to be seen on the back, the sides and the front, according to how of this. In fact I have noted that the general movement on elaborate dresses is toward the back, many of them having the fronts perfectly plain and the backs highly finished, puffed, draped, and finished with wide sashes.

A Faquin model that illustrates this was made of dark blue velvet, the dress, the front of the skirt hanging loosely, with a large bow made of brocade in the back, but otherwise plain. There were two bows on

Dark colored broche skirts are being made up with bodices of printed velvet, these last having color in them, but in dark brown hats this fashion is lovely, although an trouble, and I think as long as paniers, crinolines, hoops are worn it will continue to be smart.

TEACHING CHILDREN MUSIC WITH SYMBOLS

A FEW years ago in Atlanta's public schools experienced teachers labored valiantly to teach their pupils the names of the scale notes and the scale spaces.

Quite often they gave it up as a hopeless task, until ones resorting to intercession. "The letters of these names, children," they would say, "are very strenuous, but you can remember them, for ever good boy don't right?" You can remember them that way. The spaces stand for "y-a-c-h."

It was little, but as soon as the novelty wore off, they forgot it all. By the same principle, but a different and perhaps more effective tool, the tantalizing boys and girls from 6 to 16 so that music flows into them like water, and they learn it by percolation, and later flows out again, original, wailing perfect.

It is called Fletcher. Miss Fletcher, one can see it taught in Atlanta, at the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, and at private schools. It is taught with the same spirit under masters in the north and in Europe.

MISS FLETCHER'S IDEA. Twenty-five years or more ago Evelyn Fletcher, a Toronto, Canada, girl, finished her musical education in Europe, and then came back to America to teach it here. Why not put music on the scientific basis? she thought. Why not teach it by the method of games and pastimes instead of making them travel the long and rough pathway of art to find life in it only at the end?

She had the same idea and plan originated by Madame Montessori. By it children learn to think and express themselves in music. Its principles are based on the basis of psychology and through a system of games and stories gives a child a fundamental training in the theory of music, or to person vocal or instrumental. It is further said to develop the child mind, body, and soul, and artistically as no other method of musical instruction has ever done.

At the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, we have a full illustration of this new and remarkable instruction.

In a room in the back of the building we have gathered every afternoon a group of children held spell-bound over an exposition of a new and delightful game, strips of wood, being taught that they are acquiring music, learning that they have always received from their mothers "your mother's practice, dear."

CLASSES OF YOUNG. One may hit upon a class of young people who have just topped the six-year period. They are taught the method. Or gathered in the room may be seen groups of six-year-olds. In either class the number taught is never more than seven.

Take a boy, for example, who is taught to play with the objects on the table. He is told to hear the delightful story-explanations of what he is learning.

On the table, which is stretched in five blocks, is an automata scale. From a box the teacher takes two wooden strips, strips of board serried in the shape of a piano keyboard. "Mr. Treble," and "Mrs. Bass," the children call them. From the piano's box the teacher takes a piece of wood, he sees the shape of whole note, half note, quarter notes, etc., and the teacher taping an automata scale, from the piano, he can touch and play that it is a house on fire and that all the notes are people that must be rescued. The teacher, who is the most developed, cooperates with the teacher of science to impress them on his brain.

SEEING WHAT YOU HEAR. "Now," says the teacher, "go to the piano over there and touch the keys and see what they sound like." If Mary is one of the younger ones, she will note the note in the treble scale "C" or the deepest she can find in "G."

All right. The piano note corresponds to one of the lines or spaces on the tapestry. She is told where the note goes, which she can repeat just a moment ago. Before long she can tell exactly where a note goes on the scale by hearing it struck on the piano, she sees that note in her mind transfigured on a black line, she sees it on the sheet and sees that she hears.

That is where some budding bass clef looks like better than her mother herself does; already she has replaced many of the scale and knows exactly where they are on the keyboard, and instead of having her budding brain fagged with driving knowledge made easy by its novelty and the games and stories which the teacher has interwoven with it to make the learning pleasant.

DOLI SOLDIERS.

One of these games is played with wooden soldiers. They are planted sturdy in a row on the table, like the seven periods in the scale.

The first soldier is the red leader for which he stands.

Then Mary or Billy is told to sing a tune, and the soldiers are set, as perhaps each soldier is touched as his note is sounded and as she reaches the octave note No. 1 is bounced from his place at the end of the row to the head. The children have made up quaint little melodies of their own in their soldier game, some words with them.

"The fish are swimming' all around," sang Mary, and the fish did as she scuttled up the soldier boy scale. Then down she came with "Cause they had a place to walk upon the ground."

And behold! She had a place. The Fletcher method is training the child to compose, something that generally follows a year or two.

That is the keynote of the Fletcher method, to teach the child to do for himself, to be original, not imitative, creative instead of passive. Once he was driven to learn, now he is led.

Later the wooden symbols of music are replaced by the printed ones.

These he cuts out and pastes on the printed scale. And after while he is able to play the keyboard on the blackboard scale. Once more they have been presented to him in a new way and made real.

TANGIBLE TIME BLOCKS.

Other phases of music, some of the most difficult, are shown to him in the same natural and easy way. Thus has ever been a stumbling block to pupils old and young. The Fletcher method gives a child a sense of time, of rhythm, of his time, by using strips of wood like rulers. There is a long strip for the whole note, one just half as long for the half note, one quarter as long for the fourth note, and so on down to the tiny strip that represents the sixty-fourth note. Again the teacher is the guide, the student the follower.

There is a scale, and a scale of the most difficult and abstract, that the children hold spell-bound over an exposition of a new and delightful game, strips of wood, being taught that they are acquiring music, learning that they have always received from their mothers "your mother's practice, dear."

There is a long strip for the whole note, one just half as long for the half note, one quarter as long for the fourth note, and so on down to the tiny strip that represents the sixty-fourth note. Again the teacher is the guide, the student the follower.

There is a scale, and a scale of the most difficult and abstract, that the children hold spell-bound over an exposition of a new and delightful game, strips of wood, being taught that they are acquiring music, learning that they have always received from their mothers "your mother's practice, dear."

CLASSES OF YOUNG. One may hit upon a class of young people who have just topped the six-year period. They are taught the method. Or gathered in the room may be seen groups of six-year-olds. In either class the number taught is never more than seven.

Take a boy, for example, who is taught to play with the objects on the table. He is told to hear the delightful story-explanations of what he is learning.

On the table, which is stretched in five blocks, is an automata scale. From a box the teacher takes two wooden strips, strips of board serried in the shape of a piano keyboard. "Mr. Treble," and "Mrs. Bass," the children call them. From the piano's box the teacher takes a piece of wood, he sees the shape of whole note, half note, quarter notes, etc., and the teacher taping an automata scale, from the piano, he can touch and play that it is a house on fire and that all the notes are people that must be rescued. The teacher, who is the most developed, cooperates with the teacher of science to impress them on his brain.

SEEING WHAT YOU HEAR. "Now," says the teacher, "go to the piano over there and touch the keys and see what they sound like." If Mary is one of the younger ones, she will note the note in the treble scale "C" or the deepest she can find in "G."

All right. The piano note corresponds to one of the lines or spaces on the tapestry. She is told where the note goes, which she can repeat just a moment ago. Before long she can tell exactly where a note goes on the scale by hearing it struck on the piano, she sees that note in her mind transfigured on a black line, she sees it on the sheet and sees that she hears.

That is where some budding bass clef looks like better than her mother herself does; already she has replaced many of the scale and knows exactly where they are on the keyboard, and instead of having her budding brain fagged with driving knowledge made easy by its novelty and the games and stories which the teacher has interwoven with it to make the learning pleasant.

FOLLOWING a week of comparative darkness, the lights will be turned on big at the Atlanta Opera for the next six days. With the Atlanta theater, devout of music, the curtain will go up on the last two melodramas with the Lyric dark from Monday to Monday, last night. The first two were respectively dull and for ought save vanderbilt and the perennial "movies."

But the switch is on again. The Atlanta has over one thousand lights.

With the opening of the Bijou for the week, vaudeville trips the Forsyth, and the Atlanta continues to show feature movie films, the Bijou holds to melodrama.

And so it goes, forming the core of the theatrical apple this week.

"Mutt and Jeff" is advertised for Monday and Tuesday at the Atlanta.

As a musical and comedy embodiment, "Salome," the English opera booked for the Atlanta, cannot fail to live up to some of the excitement

that has been created by Madame X,

one of the most elaborate of plays.

TWO FAMOUS CHARACTERS IN

PANAMA

A musical melodrama, a novel to say the least. And one can through the canal and disappear and to carry an amount of scenery hardly imagine Mutt and Jeff either in the role of a musician or a hero or a villain. Who would naturally follow that there will be some awful funny scenes in the Atlanta's "Panama."

W. H. Fisher and his son, who have assisted So Fisher and Owen Davis, wrote "Mutt and Jeff in Panama," added by Lee and Gohr, music, seen at the R. H. Coyle's lyrics and Guy Hill's managerial ability.

The play will see service in Boston, Jeff, his double-headed pincers and the villain. Foreign spies steal plans for Canal Zone defense.

So Fisher and his son, who have spent ten thousand bucks, "Hoofah!" lay ten on Flyaway for the third race.

Patricia and Dorothy, who have already been stamped here, are

one of the most elaborate of plays.

THE LEOPARD'S "SALOME"

Another of the musical and

comedy em-

bodiments, "Salome," the English opera, coming here Thursday and Friday, is the first time it has been produced in English and it adds to the company's repertoire.

It is a musical and comical opera.
